

To whom it may concern:

I am opposed to allowing my bank, creditors, long distance provider, etc. contact me by phone, at their will, to promote and market additional products, services, and partner products.

My home is already barraged with too many credit offers, product offers, etc via postal mail and email, but at least I can deal with those on my own timeline - and not feel interrupted during what seems to be an ever-shrinking amount of family time I value each week.

Telemarketing telephone calls of any type (regardless of whether from current creditors or not) are intrusive and not welcome in my home.

Please support Indiana's Telephone Privacy law and deny Consumer Bankers Association's (CBA) request to roll back the law.

Sincerely,
Steve Brunner
